FIELD NOTES

The Multi-Format Team Championship is the traditional lid-lifter for the VSGA championship season, a way to knock off some rust and get back into the flow of competition. The two-person captain's choice opening round rarely decides the champion, but a side must go low on the first day to have a chance to collect hardware after the second round of modified alternate shot. No winner has shot worse than 61 in the opening round in the six-year history of the championship. Positioning is key.

- Brandon Ramsuer and Ryan Taylor (pictured) became the first side to win multiple championships in this event by holding on for a one-stroke victory in 2024. They also won the title in 2020, securing the victory with a birdie in a playoff. They'll look to become the first side to claim back-to-back titles this year.
- The Ramsuer/Taylor pairing is the only past champion side in the field, but John Rosenstock won in 2022 (paired with Trey Wren) and Kyle Bailey won in 2019 (with Jeff Long).
- Both runner-up sides (Marshall Tinsley/Adam Marshall and Mark Hourigan/Danny Pedrazzi) are in the field.
- Ramsuer is one of several Virginians competing in the upcoming U.S. Amateur Four-Ball Championship, which will be held May 17-21 at Plainfield CC in Edison, N.J. Ramsuer qualified for the event with Bailey, who is pairing with Will Collins for this event.
- Two U.S. Amateur Four-Ball qualifying sides are in the field at Dominion Club: Ryan Rettberg and Nick Brediger, and Andrew Crowley and Ralston King. Evan Beck and Dan Walters are also competing in the U.S. Amateur Four-Ball.
- One side worth watching: Matt Sughrue and Brandon Cigna, who paired to win the VSGA Four-Ball Championship in 2019.
- Family ties in the field: John and Gavin Sload (father/son); Steve and Jay Serrao (brothers); and Ben and Braden McGrath (brothers).
- Adam Ball, a reinstated amateur, is teaming with Christopher Kapsak for this event, marking Ball's first VSGA championship appearance in more than a decade. Ball won two VSGA Junior Stroke Play Championships (2009, 2012) and two VSGA Junior Match Play Championships (2011, 2012).
